INTELLIGENCE PRODUCERS AND CONSUMERS: AN OBSOLETE DICHOTOMY?

The topic of the June 2019 Volume of the Journal of European and American Intelligence Studies (JEAIS) is “Intelligence Producers and Consumers: An Obsolete Dichotomy”. This issue aims to address the evolution of the intelligence tradecraft by looking at the way roles and tasks changed and continue evolving across the practice of intelligence, whether we look at the Government or the Private Sector. While the mainstream theorization of the intelligence cycle sets out a separation of the roles and tasks that each phase entails, the transformation of the broader intelligence environment (including here not just the extended Intelligence Community, but also the security landscape, and the range of resources available for the intelligence practitioners) puts under question its present relevance. The editors invite contributors to share their research and ideas on the profile of different stakeholders in the intelligence cycles and the transformation of the relationship between producers and consumers of intelligence. By producers of intelligence, the editors mean not just the analysts, but also the collectors, field officers, assets, OSINT providers, and all actors involved in the collection and processing of information, the elaboration of intelligence products and its dissemination. The concept of consumer includes the decision makers and any other recipient of the intelligence product.

This volume aims at investigating new roles, methodologies and process in the New Age of Intelligence across the broader intelligence tradecraft and the extended Intelligence Community. The topics of interest to be inspected in this issue of the JEAIS include, but are not limited to:

- Profiles and needs of intelligence consumers;
- Profiles and skills of intelligence consumers (within the public and the private sectors);
- Patterns of interactions between producers and consumers of intelligence;
- Boundaries and communication across the intelligence cycle;

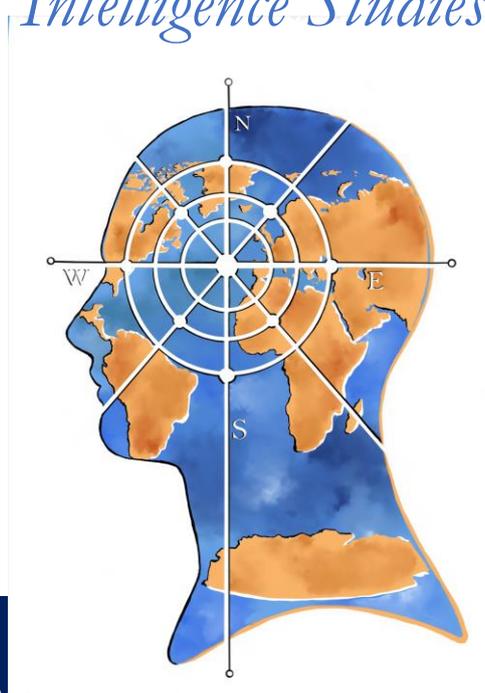

- All references should be numbered consecutively as footnotes at the end of each page.
- In the text, references should be cited by a superior character of the corresponding number. For further information, consult The Chicago Manual of Style, 14th edition.
- All articles undergo a rigorous double-blind peer review process.

- Oversight challenges: who watches whom?
- Developing a common language for intelligence stakeholders.
- Education and training needs for intelligence stakeholders.
- “2020 Intelligence Cycle:” Quo Vadis?
- Emerging actors in intelligence collection and analysis;
- The politicization of intelligence in the Government and the Public Sector.

The editors look forward to receiving theoretical and empirical papers, syntheses, expert opinions and book reviews in relation to the intelligence tradecraft. On this account, perspectives from both scholars and practitioners in the Government and the Private Sector that address applied and theoretical issues are expected to provide significant approaches on present and future practice and trends.

- Manuscripts, as well as questions and requests for clarifications should be submitted to the Managing Editors by email at: jeais@rieas.gr and secretary@rieas.gr.
- Final manuscripts should be submitted to the editors by May 1st, 2020, with an expected publication date of June 30th, 2020.
